

Case Name _____

Date _____

Family Research Project – Confidential

Your Name _____ E-mail _____

Address _____ City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Contact number (now or if we go forward) _____

Relationship to the missing person _____

General Information:

Name of _____ D.O.B. _____

Last known address _____

When was this _____

Object of the search. The why and the want to:

What I need from you is the story of why the search and basically what you have done so far.

Usually when someone comes to me, they have already tried to do the research and hit a wall. That means they have gotten as far as they can and are now lost.

Sometimes friends and relatives tell you to leave it alone, or tell you that it just cannot be done.

Sometimes we wait until other events in life have taken place and then the need to know just gets stronger and stronger until you decide to try.

The following pages are used to organize a research project with the known information to find the unknown.

This is a worksheet form that can be used as a guideline to provide whatever information you have, no matter how little you think you have, to provide a basis for a review of the project.

All I need is a starting point and if that can be found, I should know if the project can be done.